A recent radio workshop for youth attracted participants from Thursday Island and Bamaga.

The two-day creative sessions was facilitated by actor Aaron Fa'aoso, Sydney-based writer/director Simon Luckhurst, and from Queensland Health Alisha McGuinness to work on ideas for a radio drama that will tackle issues relating to our young people aged between 16 and 25.

A small gathering of interested participants spent time at the Bowls Club working on developing characters for the 12-week local radio drama that will go to air on Radio 4MW in August, 2009.

The Queensland Health initiative is aiming to highlight issues that are specific to the Torres Strait and NPA.

Young people will be given the opportunity soon to audition for paid roles as local characters once the storyline has been developed.
